F—ondly have we watched
O—’er the growth of this modest volume—this
R—ecord of the glorious year 1915-1916.
E—ach phase of “Ole Miss” life we have attempted to portray and
W—e offer this, the “Miss” of ’16, as an appreciation
O—f the spirit that has become so vital a part of us.
If, in the future, our
R—eaders turn away occasionally from the busy, workaday world and
D—erive pleasure in scanning these pages once more, we may say: “well done.”

Greetings '16

"May I print a kiss
Upon your cheek,"
She did not seem to care
So they went to press—
And I'll confess,
The edition printed
Was rare.

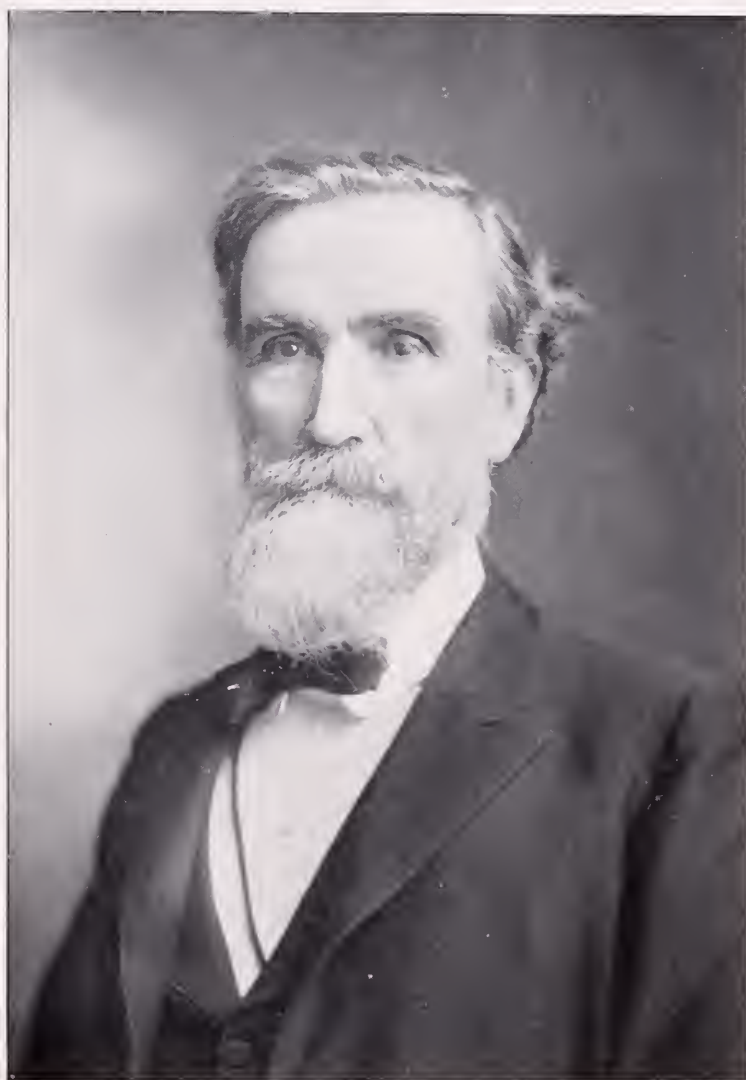

Dedication.

TO

RICHARD MARION LEAVELL

Emeritus Professor of Philosophy, Legislator, leader of men, promoter of public enterprise, patron of public education, pioneer in public service; distinguished in war
but greater in peace; the friend of man, the Christian citizen—this book is affectionately dedicated.

DR. RICHARD MARION LEAVELL

Miss Gertrude Lassiter: "Now, you could have left that out."

Richard Marion Leavell

Richard Marion Leavell, M. A., L. L. D., was born in Newberry District, S. C., August 31, 1838. At the age of two years, he came to Mississippi, settling in Pontotoc County. Here he attended the B. R. Webb Academy, entering the University of Mississippi in 1856, when Dr. F. A. B. Barnard was President of the institution.

After three years of faithful study, Dr. Leavell graduated with honors, and entered upon the profession of teaching.

It was not long, however, until his country called him, and in the month of April, 1861, with the rank of Lieutenant, he entered the Second Mississippi Infantry. After a year's service in the army of Northern Virginia, he was elected Captain of his company, and held this command until the battle of Gettysburg, when he was made prisoner and carried to Fort Delaware, thence to Johnson's Island, Ohio. During his imprisonment here, Dr. Leavell was a member of a class of students of Law, taught by General J. Z. George. Through the instrumentality of Dr. Barnard, his former college President, who, though a Northern man, was Dr. Leavell's staunch friend, he was liberated.

After returning to Mississippi, he opened an institution at Verona, under the name of Verona Male Academy, where many men who have since attained prominence, came under his ennobling influence.

In 1871, he was elected to the State Legislature, where he became especially noted as a parliamentarian.

In 1882, the Trustees of Mississippi College called him to the chair of English in that institution, where he remained until 1889, when he was elected to the chair of English and Belles-Lettres in his Alma Mater. The degree of satisfaction with which this duty was discharged, is attested by the singular fact that the Board of Trustees adopted a special resolution of approval in his favor. Two years later, he became Professor of Philosophy and Political Economy in this institution, which chair he filled until the year 1908.

Outside of strictly school affairs, Dr. Leavell has held various positions of prominence and trust in the State. He has served as President of the Mississippi State Teachers' Association, and has held many official positions in religious organizations.

As a friend, he is sincere; as a teacher, he has no superior, and as a man, his character is unimpeachable. Probably no personality in the State of Mississippi has touched more lives for good, and done more to further the great Brotherhood of Man, than the noble and revered subject of this sketch.

Opportunity

*They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.*

*Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day—
At sunrise every soul is born again.*

*Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.*

*Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arms to all who say "I can."
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep,
But yet might rise and be again a man.*

*Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous Retribution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past,
And find the future's pages white as snow.*

*Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.*

—Walter Malone, '87.

Prof. Erwin: "I see."

A Fool There Was

(With apologies to Rudyard Kipling).

(But he would understand).

*A fool there was, and he took an exam,
(Even as you or I),
For which for days he'd stayed home to cram
(He called it boning—the Freshmen lamb!)
But the fool he found his brain like a clam,
(Even as you or I).*

*O the hours we spend and the days we waste,
And the times we swear off for “quits,”
That are spoiled by the thought of our coming doom!
(And now he knows that it did no good,
For the Profs, they gave him fits).*

*A fool there was, various things he took,
(Even as you or I).
For mercy he begged, but the Prof's head shook,
And the Prof wrote “20” in his little blue book,
While the fool he was quelled by a stony look,
(Even as you or I).*

*O the wrath unspoke, and the cusses we choke,
And the excellent epithets,
Which belong to the Prof who busted us all
(That hard-hearted Prof who busted us all!)
And all of our hope upsets.*

*And it isn't to trust and then go BUST,
That hurts our feelings so.
It's coming to know that we never will pass
(For his heart is hard as a piece of glass),
And his grades are always low!*

A Dressed Chicken

Freshman! Halt!! Tremble!!!

Heed Thou This Message From the Lofty Sophs.

WHEREAS:—

Thou, Freshman, art the lowest of God's creatures, not barring even the Boll-Weevil; Since thou art sent here to have thy appalling greenness rubbed off and to grow up a pride to the family;

Since in thy scant knowledge thou kennest nothing of the sacred rites, the holy customs, the awful vengeance for their violations which here prevails—since thou art a FRESHMAN in all that the Ole Miss. arts pertains:

THEREFORE

TAKE HEED to these Ten Commandments lest thine years may have no chance to number three-score and ten.

I.

Fear thou and honor the lofty members of the glorious class of 1918—second only to the lords of the faculty who sit in Olympian state upon the sacred Chapel Rostrum—do reverence unto them; when their paths cross thine humbly step aside and doff thine hat—yet dare not to raise presumptuous eyes.

For though a cat may look at a king thou art no cat.

II.

Take thou humility for thy motto; keep thou an humble and a contrite heart.

For a peaceful tongue keepeth a peaceful body.

III.

If one of thy superiors should deign to notice thee, swell not thyself up with presumptuous pride so that thine brain forgetteth the humble "Sir."

For

"Though the mills of the Sophs grind slowly

They grind exceeding fine,"

And thou mightest lose interest in chairs.

IV.

When thou hearest the strident clangor of the Hash Hammer (which, translated into simple language for thy simple understanding, is the Dinner Bell) take thou thy stand to the rear.

Dare not to enter while yet an Upper Classman hath not preceded thee, even

V.

When the dinner hour approacheth restrain thine hunger lest thine mouth water.

For such is displeasing in the sight of thy superiors.

VI.

When in the postoffice thou receivest a letter neither blush thou openly nor rejoice in public with sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

For one of thy betters, having received none, may become wroth and smite thee, yea, smite thee hip and thigh.

And then would there be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth—and thine would be the weeps, thine the wails, and thine the gnashing teeth.

VII.

If, in their wisdom, thy lords have seen fit to let thee lo watch the 'Varsity at practice, take thou much care that thou be neither seen nor heard.

But if the team of an Enemy shall be present, root thou and make noise, yea, much noise, lest thou be made to make more noise when the shades of even have fallen.

VIII.

Exalt not thyself to the skies.

Nay, not even if thou were some potatoes and seemed good in the eyes of the maidens of thine native village.

For here thou art but a lowly Freshman.

IX.

Thou shalt wear socks.

X.

Even if in thy blindness and superstition thou believest thine self a gay Lothario and a breaker of hearts, beware, beware, BEWARE, O thou miserable one, lest thou circumambulatest the co-eds.

For greatest of all—greater even than wearing thy pants (for no Freshman weareth trousers) rolled too high in this "peccalum peccatorum."

For this sin a terrible vengeance is ours, saith the Sophs.

Thy very life is forfeit; thine native village shall be razed and its site ploughed with salt.

Yea, and thou shalt repent; in sackcloth and ashes shalt thou repent; and revile thyself; and curse the day on which thou wast born.

Therefore—watch thou thy feet that they walk a chalk line.

Ironorelasts.

*He planned Her a castle of Manhood Strength
In the Land-Where-Dreams-Come-True;
Its foundation was of a pure, clean Yonth,
And the walls were white with resplendent Truth;
The towers were finished of Hope and Joy,
And—become a Man—this grown-up Boy,
With glowing pride in his work—and meet—
Laid it all at her dainty feet.*

—She laughed.

*She crowned Him king in her heart of hearts,
And his wish was to her command;
She gave him the first of her maiden charms,
And her Faith she put in his open arms,
While the Trust she laid at his willing feet
Was such as rarely the angels meet;
And the Love that burned in her virgin breast
Was epitome of all her best,*

—He smiled.

Commencement Day

*Once more we meet beneath the bending oaks,
Not as we gathered in the bygone days,
When storms of dark uncertain fate had come,
And clouds obscured the gold commencement rays.
Now once again as in the past we meet,
As anxious students in the chapel seat,
And hand clasps hand again;
While each remembers all the good,
Forgot is all the pain.*

*Once more we meet and hear the same old bell,
Meel as we parled, loyal, brave, and true,
Though some of us the hand of time has touched,
Changing, perhaps, our hair to frosty hue.
Now once again, as in the past we meet,
And memories of yore we greet.
Each owns the past was best,
Though mingled with regrets,
We cherish its bequest.* —W. L.

"THE ELECTED"

Prettiest Co-Ed: Miss Lucille Campbell; Miss Gertrude Lassiter, second; Miss Nannie Farley, third.

Most Popular Co-Ed: Miss Emily Hedleston; Miss Gertrude Lassiter, second; Miss Margie Parks, third.

Handsome Man: Jeff Hamm; "Cupid" McCullough, second; Gus Crisler, third.

Most Popular Man: Mac Reed; Johnnie Valentine, second; Pop Harris, third.

Best All-Round Athlete: "Little Joe" Evans; Bill Finger, second; "Little Scotchie" McCall, third.

Best Co-Ed Athlete: Miss Ellie Jeter; Miss Margie Parks, second; Miss Gladys Bryan, third.

Best Student: "Flip" Robinson; Harry Bryan, second; Bill Finger, third.

Most Popular Professor: Dr. Hedleston; Dr. Milden; Dr. Torrey.

Most Likely to Succeed: Harry Bryan and Johnnie Valentine, tied; E. F. McCall, second; Mac Reed, third.

Most Likely to be a Bachelor: "Ulysses" Grant; Dr. Winston, second; D. W. Holmes, third.

The Dude of '16: Tonquin Stovall; "Cupid" McCullough, second; Katzenmeyer and Ratcliffe tied for third place.

Biggest Politician: Ed. Bramlette; E. Bunyan Carter, second; Johnnie Valentine, third.

Hot-Air Tank: D. W. Holmes; Aycock, second; Patrick, third.

Best Dancer (Girl): Miss Virginia Townsend; Miss Aline Ray, second; Miss Marvel Ramey, third.

Best Dancer (Boy): "Cupid" McCullough; Cephus Anderson, second; Ed. Bramlette, third.

Freshest Freshman: Belk; Jackson, second; Witherington, third.

Greenest Freshman: Reynolds; Belk, second; Witherington, third.

Biggest Ladies' Man: Bob Crook; D. W. Holmes, second.

The Only "Soft-Talker": Miss Pattie Brooks Jones; D. W. Holmes, second; Miss Estelle Oldham, third.

Ugliest Man: U. S. Grant; Tabler, second; "Slim" Howard, third.

Biggest Liar: "Dad" Dawson; Sam Kendall, second; Dick Potter and Jim McClure, third.

Type of Girl Preferred: The majority of votes was cast for brunettes; however, there were several noticeable exceptions, for instance, Schall Yerger is broad in his choice and likes anything that wears a skirt.

The University's Greatest Need: Y. M. C. A. Building; New Dormitory.

Why I Love Ole Miss: "Just 'cause."

Biggest Thing Ole Miss Has Done or is Doing: Surviving these 68 years thru the many generations of selfish politicians who have made her a political football.

Favorite Pastime: "Enjoying "Social intercourse" between the hours of 8 A.M. and 3:20 P.M.

LITERARY

Miss Mary Bibb Long: "I'll give you a demerit for that."

Success.

*He knows not what he seeks, who hopes to find me 'twixt
Successive settings of the sun. I rush not forth
To meet him, bear he gold of Ophir, Midas-touch,
Or knowledge of the universe and all therein.
Like modest maid, I wait for him to come—I must Be sought.*

*Who finds my door at last must reach it by milestones
Of Difficulty and Despair, where torches of Ambition oft flare dim and darkly on the way
Who gains the inner shrine has yet another test:
'Tis his to know the password of Efficiency,
And hold within his grasp the key of Work—this whim
Of mine thus gratified: that he have both, or be Denied.*

*I am a greedy thing—demanding all of Youth,
And oft-times Manhood's better years, as my just fee.
I am a jealous thing—no rival do I brook;
No Pleasure, Rest, nor Love, no thought of others—Friend
Nor Foe—to stand in favor o'er myself, do I
Permit*

*And when his life-mirage reality, he finds
Me—gloating o'er dead Friends-That-Might-Have-Been, and Love
That could have filled his rayless life; o'er Rest and Joy,
His God-intended needs. Sometimes his hardened, burned
Out, hollow soul dull satisfaction feels, but more
By far does he outnumber, who with vision cleared
Too late, to what he paid, what realized,—bemoan
His Fate.*

Most Astounding Facts Unearthed

We dare say that scarcely any of the student body is aware of the fact that our University is in the throes of the greatest campaign of her history. The Amalgamated Association of Educational Sunbeams in one of its recent deliberations decided to donate one million dollars to the university who has the best class-room recitations in the United States. Ole Miss turned in her name as soon as the announcement was made. Mr. U. C. Allyoucan was sent out by the Educational Sunbeams to visit all colleges in the United States. His duty was to secretly and suddenly walk into a class-room and take down everything which transpired for at least fifteen minutes. The one million dollars is to be awarded after careful examination of Mr. U. C. Allyoucan's reports. Now no one remembers this man, but he most assuredly came here. It was by the sheerest of accidents that the Annual managed to get Mr. U. C. Allyoucan's notes upon Ole Miss class-room recitations. We print them below. No interpolations have been made. It is word for word as Mr. U. C. Allyoucan reported.

"The first class I visited was James Warsaw Bell's Political Science (b). It was ten minutes before the end of the period. The following things transpired:

Mr. Bell Lecturing——

"Now this brings us to the question of the Trusts. And gentlemen, this is a question which stirs my patriotic indignation more than any other one thing with the possible exception of the Oxford Ice Plant. I hail from the home of Democracy. When my eyes opened for the first time they beheld the dew-spangled meadows, the rippling streams, and the enchanted wildernesses of golden sun-kissed Pontotoc. Pontotoc, dear Pontotoc, the mother of statesmen and the land of gourds! Yes, sir, gourds grow so big over there that they use them for bushel measures. And let me tell you something, Pontotoc is a land of milk and honey, and a land of plenty. I remember seeing Old Sam Pannel eat a water-bucket full of hard-boiled eggs at one time. And, gentlemen, let me tell you furthermore—(Bell rings). Take the next fifteen pages for the next lesson."

"I then went to Dr. Winston's class. The following transpired for the first thirty minutes:

"Yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, there is for example The Bryce, The Henderson, The Monroe, and par-tic-u-lar-ly, for example, The Emerton; then too, there is 'The Guverment of Switcherland,' a new book by Matthews; then also, for example, for example, (At this critical point the Doctor, alias 'Choppy' became excited and fell off the lecture platform) let's see, yes, yes, yes, oh yes, here is another reference, for example, there is The Robertson, The Gibbons, The Jefferson, The Stanley, The Prescott, The Motley, then also, for example, there is The Carlyle, The Froud, and oh yes, certainly The Venerable Bede, and Oh Good Night, I could give more 'sources.' Yes, yes, I have placed all of these with Miss Mayes down stairs. Now, class, we must pay more attention to this matter of Geography——."

"I then visited Mr. Bishop's senior English Class. They were having a written. The following transpired:

"Mr. Bishop: 'Now, class, I should say that these fifteen questions which I have on the board are representative tests of the 12,000 pages parallel for this week. Of course your reading was cursory, but as interested students, you are supposed to read with careful discrimination, sane judgment, searching accuracy, and alertness. You now have three minutes to answer these. Please be brief.'

"J. M. Rauch speaks up: 'Mr. Bishop, I don't understand the fourteenth sub-head under your eighth question.'

"'Well now, Mr. Rauch, I see no ground for your misinterpretation. If I were answering that question, I know exactly what I should say——."

"I next visited Dr. Kennon's Sophomore class in Electricity. The following consumed the greater portion of the period:

"'Well, Mr. Ponder, to save my soul, I can't see how you missed that. It is very simple indeed. Why if I should ask any fifth-grade child of ordinary intelligence such a foolish question, he would be insulted indeed. Now this whole idea was originated by the great Irish Physicist Michael Farraday. He had the clearest, most concise, most exceedingly accurate, most illuminating, and most penetrating, mind of any man who has ever added any contribution to scientific knowledge and scientific theory. Now of course I didn't originate this. I didn't start it, but Michael Farraday did. He saw it, he started it, he visualized it, and this is the way he saw it—this is the picture he saw in his own mind. This is very simple, but of gigantic importance. Now, Mr. Ponder, with this new light on the subject, surely you can see at once what the only result, and what the only inevitable conclusion in that case would be——."

"That night I visited Dr. Hedleston's Philosophy Class. I observed the following:

Place of recitation—Dr. Hedleston's office.

Time of recitation—7:00 P. M.

Usual circumstances—L. L. Martin, deeply emersed in profound thought; Shoat Wooten's critical ear pricked up, and on the alert to detect any subtle fallaciousness. Sam Kendall, asleep.

"Dr. Hedleston: 'We will begin to-night where we left off last night. Mr. Crosby, when is a cow a cow?'

"Mr. Crosby: 'Well, Doctor, I think I understand the drift of your question. It carries us off into a field of philosophical reflection which is necessarily technical. Our concepts of sense perception are intuitively associated with the indispensable cosmological authenticities of ancient investigation. It, of course, is teologically self-evident that great systematization of anthropological subconsciences preceed all differentiations of synthetic analysis. Thus we may be justified in determining when a cow is a cow.'

"Dr. Hedleston: 'Well, Mr. Crosby, your answer is just a little vague, but——.'"'

After a careful perusal of the above, no one can possibly entertain the doubt that Ole Miss will not get the million dollars.

The Waiting Place

By A. P. HUDSON, '13.

*I ask no questions of the wise,
Unerring Destiny that guides
My blind, uncertain course. My eyes
Seek but its way, naught else besides.*

*What though the way has led me far
Beyond the lights and loves of home;
Though graves and mists and shadows are
Upon the backward path, I roam*

*Content to bear to alien lands
Its sheaf of fading souvenirs:
The after-touch of once-loved hands,
The after-kiss of yesteryears.*

*One end I'd choose, were mine the part
To choose aught Destiny might hold—
One end to cherish in my heart
With those dear memories of old.*

*That Destiny, at last, might lead
Me home again and let me dream
Old dreams, and love old loves, and feed
Old flames. Near Heaven that would seem.*

*Content, I'd lie at yon dim gate
Within the twilight of two worlds,
Where Woman waited once and wait
She must again, where God unfurls*

*The banner of a new emprise;
And I should fear no more to roam.
Ah, then 't were easy, I surmise,
To enter that dim gate—at home.*

Important!

"We see in the working of the Master's spirit, not only the vast liberality, but the startling carelessness of Nature, who seems with infinite loving pains to create her marvels, and then to turn listlessly away while they are given over to destruction."—Moody and Lovett, chap. 6; page 123. Alas! Alas! How true this is! Only a few days ago this fact was brought home and impressed indelibly upon our memory. By the strangest of accidents we happen to discover a manuscript of monumental significance. It is of a most revolutionary character. Its contents touch, very probably the most profound and fundamental question connected with our University. We are too modest to publicly claim and demand the honor attached to our discovery. The light of publicity is painfully blinding to our tender and sensitive eyes. We are grateful, however, for the opportunity of unapologetically revealing these truths which undoubtedly would have suffered cruel and lasting oblivion had it not been our fortune to discover the manuscript mentioned above.

The manuscript is a treatise on "Popular and Fundamental Misnomers," by Prof. A. Laurance Schoep. The one particular feature which is of vital interest to us comes under the discussion of the misnomer "chair." We will quote Dr. Schoep verbatim:

"The word chair as applied to departments and subjects in the University of Mississippi, as for instance, the chair of Latin, the chair of Philosophy, etc., is manifestly a gross and horrible misnomer. It is absurd to say the least. I would suggest the following sweeping changes:

"Dr. Heddleston has the bench of Philosophy, Psychology, Ethics, Logic, and Sociology.

"Mr. J. W. Bell has the settee of Economics and Political Science.

"Mr. Bondurant has the rocker of the Latin Language and Literature.

"Dr. Longest has the sofa pillow of Freshman English.

"Mr. Rogers has the feather bed of Education."

—J. S. '16.

An Extemporaneous Effusion Upon Personalia Faculatis

(Written in heroic couplet, representative of The Restoration)

I went to the animal fair,
James Warsaw was there.
Little Allie Hume
By the light of the moon
Was combing his coal-black hair;
Bondy, he got drunk,
Fell on Longest's trunk;
Longest sneezed
And fell on his knees,
And what became of BONDURUNK?

(Bondurant-poetic license.)

Affectionately contributed by one who has passed off Political Science, Math, and Latin.

An Apology

At the last meeting of the Annual Staff, when a final review of the material was made, we discovered much to our chagrin that unconsciously many gross omissions had been made. This of course is a matter of deepest and bitterest disappointment. We have been laboring from dewy morn until late after dark trying to get an accurate portrayal of every-day "Ole Miss" life, and to discover at the last moment that we overlooked entirely some of the most prominent features is indeed "sorrow's crown of sorrow." Our sin is unforgivable, but we beg to offer this wholly inadequate apology and to briefly mention below some of the omissions we have negligently made.

Our attention is called to the fact that we have slighted some members of our dear Faculty. Well, "Yos, Yos," by the patches in old Horace's breeches, we did. There is Bondy. Never would it have done to slight Bondy in our Annual. Fifteen rahs for the Gods who put us next to this before it was too late. Alee has been with us ever since Feb. 3, 1801. It is interesting to hear him tell all about how collar buttons were first introduced into the "Ole Miss" student body nineteen years before the Mexican War. Bondy's long suit is hoss tradin,' "Lot'in" (that is, in understandable English, Latin) is merely a temple in which he finds rest and refuge for his weary soul after a long day spent out in the sordid world amid the fever and fret of horse speculation. Some older members of the Faculty may remember the dashing steed, General, which he purchased about a quarter of a century ago. The General became ill-disposed some few months back and Bondy was expecting the old fellow to kick the bucket at almost any moment. Consequently, with that keen, penetrating foresight which he usually carries in his inside vest pocket Bondy shrewdly maneuvered through a deal by which he gave one hundred dollars boot and swapped off the General for "Fov'orit" (in plain English, Favorite). The nimble thirty-two year old colt, which so gallantly conveys him pro and con every Sunday A. M. Fov'orit is immensely more klosikal (in plain English, classical) than the General. His Doric limbs, his Roman nose, the delicate poise of his tail, and the outstanding symmetry of his protruding ribs present a figure simple in all of its klosikal grandeur.

Then too, there is "Bish." Never would it have done to have forgotten David Horace in this Annual. When Bish twines his legs around each other about a dozen times, throws his lower jaw out of gear, takes his glasses off, hooks them over that tooth on the bottom row, and begins a lecture on old Bill Wordsworth's Tintern Abbey, you may as well comfortably arrange yourself for an hour's nap. Bish becomes unusually eloquent over such remarkable literary achievements as "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown," "Bringing in the Cheese," "No Not One," and "Casey Jones." He freely states that anyone who cannot appreciate Dante's Thanatopsis hasn't much of the poet in him.

Again, there is "Shorty" Griffith, whom we forgot to mention. Shorty is a regular little steam engine in breeches when it comes to work and to "busting" Freshmen. Just give him about three chances and he will thin out a bunch of Freshmen until there isn't even a shadow left. Shorty teaches Biology which is a science of Life, that is, of plants, animals, squibs, men, and other bugs. Don't get too dismal an idea of Shorty now, because really he is a clever little duck. Only the other day we caught him with his feet on a table, smoking a cob pipe and reading a pink letter. So you see he is human just like the rest of us boys.

Finally, there is Joe." If he tries to run over you with that little Ford of his, don't get mad because the poor old chump isn't responsible. His thoughts are far away in a more delightful realm. Joe has two fads, automobiles and stenographers. He also goes to the picture show very frequently to see how many Physiology students are loafing on him. Joe is an expert automobile driver. He has become so dexterous that he can handle a car almost perfectly with one hand.

The above were about all of the most conspicuous Faculty omissions. There were others which we had to suppress because this is legislative year and we are afraid of public sentiment. We don't want the Red and Blue to be trailed in the dust. Pletcher was written up by a pre-med, but the printers write us that they cannot afford to run the risk attached to sending it through the mail.

There were other omissions too beside members of the Faculty. For instance, we forgot to mention Gordon Hall, the home of democracy, free thought, cock-roaches, and pharmacutes; the Library, which is the nocturnal social center of the University; and the slums of Chinatown down in the basement of the Peabody.

We are sorry that these omissions occurred. If it had not been for our own carelessness, these features would have received their due proportion of elaboration.

Souvenir

*A ling'ring pang of lonesomeness and pain;
A thought of might-have-beens, and faint regret;
The moonlight gleaming softly through the leaves—
All these can bring you back—yes, even yet.*

*The wireless speech between fond lovers' eyes;
The subdued fragrance of the evening flower;
The distant whistling of a quaint old air—
Still bring you back to me—with subtle power.*

*The whippoorwill's sad note at twilight-time;
The sweetened sorrow in a face, tear-wet;
A heart-break sobbing from a violin—
All bring you back—it seems I can't forget.*

Wireless

*Last night you suffered; wireless message of
Your pain sped o'er the many miles
Between, and came to my attuned soul,
And all that was within me longed
To comfort you.*

*Convention-bound, I could not come to you;
I could not lay my hand in yours
And say: "I understand." I could not shed
For you the tears that came, for fear
The world might see.*

*But artificial custom has no pow'r
O'er this one thing; it stands apart,
One blossom 'midst the rue: That your hurt soul
Could call across to me, and I
Could answer you.*

Brilliant Affair of the Thirty-first

On the evening of February thirty-first the spacious halls of Gordon Hall were thrown open to the guests and visitors of the Arms and the Woman Club. Never before, in the history of the institution, has such an assemblage of notables gathered to do homage to the Goddess of the Dance. Promptly at the hour of ten, the famous Stetson Hat Band struck up the inspiring strain, "In Onions There is Strength" and the guests formed for the grand march. To miss Laundrie Marque and Mr. Sylle Asse were given the honor to lead the brilliant stroll. Would that we had space to tell of the wondrous gowns worn by the beautiful visitors, many of them (the gowns) being imported directly from Paris, Tenn. Among those so fortunate as to be included upon the invitation list were:

Miss Ima Skreem with Mr. Dirteigh Shayme
Miss Katye Dydde with Mr. Knewly Writch
Miss Daddys Doe with Mr. I. Wrekon Sew
Miss Eula B. Darned with Mr. Wellile B. Damned

Hermaean History

When it is written of an organization that its year's work has been marked by an increased enrollment, absolute harmony and a brimming over interest, it is but stating the necessary conclusion to say that the organization has enjoyed a year of Constructive Work, redounding to the honor of the organization, and resulting in inestimable benefit to its members.

Such a record can be achieved only on the basis of an "Upward and Onward" slogan; and such has been the motivating animus of the Hermaean Literary Society during the present session; and the result has been the best and most successful year for the Society in over a decade.

Starting the year under the presidency of Lewis Barrett Jones, the Society soon manifested an intention to make the session one of accomplishment; and under the guiding genius of Daniel Rupert Johnson, who assumed the presidency at the beginning of the Second Term, the Society more than maintained the interest shown at the beginning of the year, and sustained its purpose of accomplishing something; and, at this writing, the year is being brought to a highly successful close under the able administration of Julian Sherrod, the Third Term President.

Briefly stated, the most important achievements of the session are the arranging of the Inter-Society Debates between our Society and Phi Sigma; the creation of the Debating Council in conjunction with Phi Sigma, through which debates with Mississippi College, Millsaps and A. & M. have been arranged as permanent events; and the placing of the Mississippian on a solid working basis.

The first of the inter-society debates saw victory perch on the Hermaean colors, as the result of the invincible efforts of Harry M. Bryan, L. O. Leavell and D. B. Aycock. The second debate saw Dame Victory change her mind, and give the honors to our rivals; but not until J. J. Valentine, Sam W. Kendall and Burns M. Deavours had made a fight worthy of their foemen's steel. The third of these debates is to be staged sometime in May.

Our representative against Mississippi College is Sam W. Kendall; and Julian Sherrod and D. B. Aycock will carry our colors against Millsaps and A. & M. respectively. In these men, we believe that we have representatives who will win for Ole Miss and Hermaean; if they do not, it will only be on account of the fact that it was written that Ole Miss should not win at any odds.

Hermaean Day was appropriately celebrated on February 22nd; and the Society acknowledges its appreciation of the beautiful vocal and musical numbers rendered on that occasion by Misses Vallie Holmes, Eva Bryan and Annie Fulton Hume. The speakers of the day were the President, D. R. Johnson; Thomas Herron Mitchell and Julian Sherrod, the orators for the celebration; and Barrett Jones, the Anniversarian.

A Hermaean conceived the plan for placing the Mississippian on a better working basis; and the Constitution adopted for that purpose is largely the result of his labors. This man is J. Pitman Stone, who has also done able work, along with D. Rupert Johnson, as our representatives on the Debating Council.

All in all, the Hermaean Society has experienced a year of splendid and encouraging success; and the prophesy is confidently made that the day of indifference to the work of the literary societies has passed forever at Ole Miss; and that the future holds in store the greatest degree of success for the organizations which are striving to give their members training in the all important art of forensic speaking.

History of Phi Sigma Literary Society

The Phi Sigma Literary Society began her career in the University of Mississippi sixty-eight years ago. Since that time, except for a short interval during the Civil War, she has been busily engaged in the inestimable service of firing young men with higher ambition, creating a desire for profounder knowledge and larger service, showing the way of grace and efficiency in parliamentary procedure, developing students in the art of ready thinking, eloquence in speech, and forcefulness in debate. Hundreds of young men have sat in the Phi Sigma hall during their course at the University and many of whom have gone out to take high rank in the affairs of our state and our nation. She has indeed written a creditable history.

The year has been characterized by a large enrollment, an unusually high average attendance, renewed interest in society work, definiteness of purpose, and unity of action. W. H. Anderson, president for the first quarter, set forth a policy that was abhered to in the main throughout the session. At the first meeting of the club, he appealed for unity of effort, posing of subjects for debate farther ahead of time than had been customary, advocated an inter-society debate with our sister Hermaeans every quarter, and co-operation with the Hermaeans in arranging at least three inter-collegiate debates during the session. E. W. Patrick, J. B. Black and R. M. Campbell rendered the Phi Sigma splendid service during the session on the inter-society debate. The first intellectual battle with our worthy and honored foe, the Hermaeans, came on November the 5th. By a contest debate the Phi Sigma selected R. H. Nason, N. S. Williamson, and S. N. McWhorter as her representatives. The logic of Nason, the eloquence of Williamson, and the classical argument of McWhorter was a credit to each and an honor to Phi Sigma. The Hermaeans showed some superiority in generalship and forcefulness delivery. The judges after much deliberation awarded the victory to the Hermaeans. J. B. Black and R. M. Campbell represented the Phi Sigma on the debating council, which arranged inter-collegiate debates early in the session with Mississippi A. & M., Millsaps, and Mississippi College to be held in April. The honor of representing Phi Sigma was worthily bestowed upon A. C. Hargis, J. C. Rice, and T. J. Barnett. The club rounded out the first term's work without missing a meeting. At the last session of the quarter, J. B. Black, a member of the senior medical class, was unanimously chosen president for the incoming term. At the same meeting the society elected on the anniversary ticket, E. W. Patrick (anniversarian), T. J. O'Quinn (orator), and E. R. Harper (declaimer). Mr. Black rendered the society splendid service as president following up the policy of the society begun in the outset. Through appointment of President Anderson, W. L. Clayton, P. L. Rainwater, and J. P. McCain represented Phi Sigma in the second inter-society contest with the Hermaeans on February the 4th. The Phi Sigma championed the affirmative on "President Wilson's policy of preparedness." Her representatives fortified their plea for the President's policy with a wall of argument in which each stone of evidence had been carefully "prepared" and placed so that the brave and creditable attack of the negative was unable to batter their defense with guns loaded with "unpreparedness." The judges rendered their decision unanimous in favor of the Phi Sigmas. The logic of Clayton was good, the argument of McCain was forceful and eloquent, Rainwater's argument was invincible and he is now looked on by many as the champion debater in the University. In the preliminary contest to select a representative to the M. I. O. A., the Phi Sigma furnished four of the five contestants. The speeches were the ablest for years. This high honor was awarded to James Boyce Henderson. On February 22, Middleton (T. A.), Ott, Grant, Reynolds, and Townsend won a decided victory in basket-ball over our sister society.

R. H. Nason of the junior law class was elected by a large majority for the third term. He is proving himself a worthy, able and aggressive president. Under his leadership and the unsurpassed loyalty, keen interest and oneness of purpose of the entire membership, the Phi Sigma Literary Debating Society will round out one of the most successful and most constructive year's work of its eventful history.

Mr. Trousdale

As to the fundamental cause which operates to make the tower of Pisa lean, authorities have not yet become fully united. Many astute and searching scholars have unselfishly devoted the better years of their lives to the final solution of this mystery. Some persist in tenaciously holding to the theory that it was built in a time of famine. Be that true or false, we believe there is scarcely an Ole Miss boy whose allowance does not become lean and gaunt and dwindle down into the darkest shades of puny insignificance toward the afternoon of the month. In the vesper of financial quiescence which closes the frolicking day of glorious squander and during the long, cold, damp hours of penury and utter financial despair which persist on and on even to the dawn of the first of the month when Son arises and hurries down to the post office to see what response Daddy has made, then it is in these dark, dismal, hopeless hours that friends are in demand.

Now it chances that we squandered our last allowance in riotous living and in the hey-day of all this pecuniary lavishness neglected to pay our laundry. Consequently we ran short of handkerchiefs. The situation was something like this: laundry unpaid, money all gone, three weeks till the first and no handkerchiefs. Money may be the root of all evil, but O! for more root!

Now under these circumstances, what is to be done? Go to Mr. T. C. Trousdale? Yea, verily. And now this brings us to the thing we wish to say. We are glad of this occasion and opportunity to in our humble and wholly inadequate way, extend to Mr. Trousdale the good will of the many boys whom he has befriended and who understand and appreciate his rugged, outright, sincere friendship. The fact may not be generally known, but doubtless Mr. Trousdale helps and befriends as many boys each year as any one on the campus. If you are "down and out" his resources are yours provided you are square and open. If you have a secret he will help you keep it. His judgment is respected, his integrity is unquestioned, his friendship is esteemed by the many boys he has known. It is fitting to strew flowers on the grave but it is a still better and more delightful privilege to express our good will so that it may be enjoyed by the living and we are glad of this chance to do it.

BOOK THE NINTH

Athletics

Fred A. Robins Director of Athletics

Coach Robins, a Mississippi product, is the resident of the proud little city of Tupelo. He first loomed up in the athletic world at Vanderbilt University, where he formed an integral part of the wonderful Commodore machine of '12, which was composed of such wonders as Ray Morrison and Ammie Sikes. He proved such a valuable man and his ability was so marked that the Fall following his graduation, McGugin secured his services to assist him in developing the '13 Vandy machine.

The next year we find Coach Robins playing the leading role in athletics at Mercer University. It was at that institution that he displayed his natural talent as a director. His teams were not only prominent factors to contend with in football, basketball, and track, but his baseball club defeated the Vandy nine in her own back yard. His excellent success at Mercer caused him to be drafted by Ole Miss.

He began his work with us last Fall, and his task was by no means an easy one. He was confronted with a bankrupt Athletic Association, green material, with few exceptions, and the hardest football schedule Ole Miss has ever had. But in spite of these handicaps he started in with grim determination and has labored diligently in the almost hopeless task of developing winning teams, and in view of the circumstances has made a most creditable showing. He is the first Mississippian to hold the position of Director of Athletics at Ole Miss. He has that pleasing Mississippi personality and is popular with the students both on and off the field. He will be with us next year and with this year's foundation to work on Ole Miss will again forge to the front.

FOOT BALL

Judge Farley: "Now this is between us girls."

Captain Harris

In selecting their leader for '15 the Ole Miss warriors were confronted with a very simple task. And indeed they were fortunate for "Pop" not only possessed those natural qualities of leadership but he was an old timer in the game, having had several years experience, and proving his worth in almost every position. He won many laurels on the T. M. I. prep school team and his success in this respect has greatly increased since he cast his lot with Ole Miss. For three years his playing has been an inspiration to his team-mates, which proved very effective when the team was up against a rocky game. So as a crowning laurel the leadership of the '15 eleven was fittingly bestowed on one who had so faithfully and effectively served his team.

Probably never before in the history of this institution, has Ole Miss experienced such a disastrous season in football as she did in the past season. Never before had an Ole Miss team suffered so many defeats, or had such large scores piled up against it. But "there's a reason," and more than one. It was not the fault of the coach, or the team. Both gave us the best that was in them. It was all due to the fact that we had practically none but inexperienced material from which to pick a team, and with this material we had to face one of the hardest schedules an Ole Miss team ever had. It was practically impossible to round this raw material into form so as to successfully cope with these strongest teams of the south.

Ole Miss opened the season with a 10 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Jonesboro Aggies. This defeat proved beyond a doubt that our team was, indeed, a weak one. But the next week our boys came back, and with an invincible determination and that fighting tiger spirit, they succeeded in walloping S. P. U. Of the remaining six games we were able to win only one—that again Hendrix. In succession L. S. U., Vandy, A. & M., Mississippi College, and Alabama piled up big scores against us.

Notwithstanding our overwhelming defeats, our boys played brilliantly at times. Among those playing stellar roles were: Captain Harris, Dear, Finger, Dawson, Neely, and Collette. Especially did Finger star against Vandy at Memphis, and Collette against the "Farmers" at Tupelo. With a majority of the team back next year, and with some old men coming back, we should have another team that will come up to the Ole Miss standard. Let's pull for it.

Allan Collette: "Now, fellows we've got to get this."

Miss "Doug" Olsen: "I'm mighty sorry about that."

Captain McCall

In "Little Scotchie" the basketball team had an ideal captain. His aggressive work on the team of last year stamped him as an admirable leader. And this year when he was called to lead the team he undertook his task with his characteristic coolness and made good in the broadest sense of that word. In the game always and solely with the interest of his team at heart, his playing had a most telling effect, not only by way of encouragement to his team-mates and on his opponent, but on the final results of the game.

McCall (Captain)

In basket ball, as in football, we were troubled during the last season with inexperienced and undeveloped material, and, as a result, our successes were few. Although we lost a majority of our games, our men were in the game fighting from the beginning to the final whistle, and many of the games were more hotly contested than the score would indicate.

We took the first game of the season from College Hill, but the closeness of the score was evidence that we lacked a great deal of having a championship team. Next our Basketeers journeyed to Jackson, Tennessee, where they dropped a game to Union and one to Jackson "Y." But the following week they evened up with Union by walloping her here on the campus to the tune of 27 to 24. After this victory A. & M., Mississippi College, L. S. U., and Millsaps visited the campus and added one or two defeats each to our "Lost" column. While in most of these games our men were clearly outclassed, they fought hard, and in more than one game this fighting spirit kept the results doubtful till the final whistle.

Captain McCall, who played one of the guards, was probably the brightest star on the team. Wing, at the other guard, played excellent ball, notwithstanding the fact that he weighs less than 140 pounds. At forward, Fulton, Reynolds, and Fields played consistent ball, while Holliday, Townsend, and Young alternated at center.

Probably one of the most pleasing features in regard to basketball is, that all of this year's team will be back next year; and with their experience, and with what new material we may have, prospects are bright for a winning team in '17.

Several Students: "Season ticket for reserved seats on top of Gordon Hall."

Captain McInnis

In selecting McInnis to captain the 1916 baseball team, the letter men of the '15 "nine" did the only logical thing they could have done in this regard; for "Mac" was the only "veteran" on the squad, he, having been one of the mainstays of the team for three years. "Runt" showed his ability as a baseball player while he was a lowly Freshman, making the Ole Miss pitching staff that year along with such stars as Steve Mitchell and Lane Chandler. He not only made the team, but he was called upon to do mound duty in some of the most important games of the season, and he responded by "delivering the goods." In 1914 he pitched the single game for us against the strong Illinois team, and has the distinction of being the only pitcher beating them during their invasion of the South. In 1915 "Mac," on account of his consistent hitting, was played in the outfield, when he didn't pitch. And the batting averages show that he led the team wielding the willow with an average of well over three hundred. This year Mac is slated to captain the team from the outfield, and from the present outlook, he is going to have the deserved honor of leading one of the best baseball teams Ole Miss has ever had.

1916 Prospects

Notwithstanding that it is early in the season and very little has been done towards perfecting our '16 baseball team, still we have seen enough to convince us that we have the material for a championship team. Only three games have been played and with comparatively strong teams, but our boys showed their superiority in each contest, winning them all with ease. The material this year from which to pick the team is more abundant than ever before. With the exception of Griffin and Jones, all of last year's team is back. In addition to that strong aggregation we have Anderson and Cassibry, catchers; Allen, first base; Murphy, shortstop, and Bethea, out-field, all of whom were in school last year but were ineligible on account of an S. I. A. A. ruling. Besides these seasoned men there is some very promising material among the Freshmen.

Coach Robins has practically selected his mainstays for the season. Holmes and McKay of last year's team will be depended on to do most of the twirling, with Freshman Hicks, Wilson and Dunn coming in for a share of the work. With Anderson and Cassibry doing the receiving we claim to have the catching department in the S. I. A. A. Anderson made the team his first year in school. He has all a catcher needs and we are looking for him to star this year. Cassibry is also a good receiver. This is his first year on an Ole Miss team; however, he caught three years for Millsaps before coming to us. Allen, at first base, will "stack up" with any of them in fielding, hitting, or on the bases. So far he is hitting like a fiend, getting everything coming his way, and stealing everything in sight. Scarborough has been shifted to second, which seems to be his natural position, as he is displaying more form than ever before. Murphy, an old timer, is back at short. All the Ole Miss fans who have seen him perform, have a feeling of "ease" when one is hit in Bill's direction. Carr is again taking care of the difficult corner. He covers a lot of territory and his "whip" to first reminds one of the days when Joe Evans had charge of the third sack. The outfield is being guarded by Captain McInnis, Beanland, and Bethea. These men are good fielders, possess strong arms, and are fast on the bases. They are also there with the "willow." Last year Captain McInnis and Beanland lead the team in hitting, while Bethea, in '14, while catching for Mississippi College, finished the season with an average above that of any other player in the S. I. A. A. Fields, Wilson, and Farmer are strong candidates for the outfield and are pushing the regulars for a berth.

Our schedule this year is the hardest Ole Miss has ever had. We have games with the best teams in the South, and are glad to be equal to the occasion. With the excellent team we have, our goal is not only the State Championship, but the Championship of the S. I. A. A. And unless we miss our guess, the end of the '16 season will find Ole Miss the proud possessor of both titles.

Our "Little Joe" Evans

To enumerate in detail the startling career of this wonderful athlete would give rise to enough substance to fill this entire volume. So on account of the small space allotted, we are forced to give only a few of the instances in which he has stood out most prominently.

Three years ago, when he came to Ole Miss, he was just a tiny freshman, but even then he displayed the marks of a coming star. In spite of his small size, he made his M in both football and baseball that year. Although his playing was sensational on several occasions during that year, it was the next year that he won fame for both himself and Ole Miss. With increased weight and experience, coupled with his natural ability, he was the particularly bright star in every gridiron battle. But it was in baseball that he displayed the greatest form and in which he was destined to rise. It might safely be said that his playing was individually responsible for Ole Miss winning the State Championship that Spring. He returned to Ole Miss the next year only to be disqualified by the S. I. A. A. for playing Summer baseball. He was therefore unable to render his beloved Ole Miss any further service, and it was in the Spring of that year that he arose out of the sphere of college stars. He signed a contract with the Cleveland Americans, and by the time the season was well under way he had caught step with the big leaguers and was permanently stationed at the difficult corner. By the end of the season he had so greatly improved that his manager gave out the statement that this year the little wonder would form part of the nucleus around which he expected to build his world championship team. A higher compliment could not be paid one so young in the game, while at the same time his manager is to be congratulated on securing such valuable services.

Scene—University Chapel.

Enter Dr. Hume—bows to members of faculty on rostrum.

Dr. Hume (to students): "I am requested to read this announcement—(reads) 'All Seniors of the several departments are urged to settle their numerous debts both in the town of Oxford and at the University. Any Senior who attempts to beat his debts this year will suffer the consequences of the law.' (Signed) 'Creditors, both in Oxford and in the University of Mississippi.' It grieves me to be called upon to make such an announcement. It seems to me that people should be taught the principles of honesty and integrity at home"——

"Doe" Lowe: "I be d—d if I know."

Julian Sherrod (springs from seat): "Sir, you have insulted every member of the Senior class. You have called in to question our integrity and our honor. We shall not stand for it. . . . Apologize, Sir!"

Dr. Bell (breaks in): "The members of this faculty stand behind the vice-chancellor and he will apologize for nothing, you little runt! This smells mighty like rebellion to me and let me tell you, gentlemen, you have 198 pounds of old Pontotoc gristle and fat to overcome before you can start anything around here."

Rice: "Gentlemen, I admire the courage and stamina of that little runt who has been made the object of Dr. Bell's vituperative invectives. We have been insulted and this miserable little runt, as he was termed by this flabby giant from Pontotoc, has championed the cause of the Class of '16. And, Sir, we are going to stand behind him."

Miss Mary Bibb Long (pale and trembling with rage, rises): "I heartily endorse everything that my classmates have said. We have been insulted and I call upon the young men of my class to defend our rights." (Miss Roudebush in audience, gasps, thinking Miss Long had lost her mind).

Dr. Bishop (rises and exclaims): "Ah, an instance of the modern woman. Where are gone the old-fashioned traits of modesty and propriety which characterized our southern womanhood of the past? I am of opinion that the girls of Ricks Hall should be more strictly controlled." (Miss Roudebush looks daggers. Commotion in audience; resentment evident).

Harry Bryan: "Far be it from me to let any would-be-interpreter of Shakespeare to slander the noble womanhood of our class. Gentlemen of the faculty, we will not stand for it."

Judge Kimbrough (gasping): "Why, Harry! You in this rebellion, too? My first honor man mixed up in such a mess! Can it be possible? Members of the faculty, unless something is done to settle this disturbance, the institution will be wrecked."

Greek Leavell: " Now, gentlemen, I have a solution to this problem and I believe it is the only solution possible. t, in behalf of the senior classes, challenge you to submit our mutual grievances to the arbitrament of a baseball game."

Dr. Hume: " Though you outnumber us and though we have the odds against us, we accept this challenge. One man armed with the cause of right is equal to all the hosts of error. I appoint Dr. Faser as manager of the faculty team and the 198-pound clear-headed gentleman from Pontotoc as captain"

Rodney Brooks (in fine scorn): "I certainly do admire your courage in accepting this challenge. In doing this you make it possible for us to realize the zenith of our aspirations. For four long years you have ridiculed and criticised us. Now we have you in our power. We are going to drag you from your pedestal of dignity and humble you in the dust of the earth. Your days are numbered and you may prepare your graves, and we, the seniors, will inscribe this epitaph to you:

University faculty,
Great chaps;
Voices of thunder,
Heap scraps.

Caught in a landslide,
Clean sweep;
No more faculty,
Scrap heap.

Stuart Dunning: "You're dern right."

Dr. Kennon: "Why, Mr. Brooks, baseball is a physical science. You haven't had more than the required amount of my Physics and you will be a poor baseball player indeed."

Herron Mitchell (rises and interrupts): "I had your little old Physics and it doesn't amount to anything. I am surprised that you would get up here and parade your little four-year course in Physics to these intelligent students."

Dr. Kennon: "It is a good thing for you that you have already had my Physics, young fellow."

Dr. Winston: "Yes, yes, why good night! of course there is the scientific side to baseball. Now, we historians particu-lar-ly enjoy tracing the course of baseball from its origin in the Middle Ages when the Bourgeoise"

Rabble: "Cut out that stuff! Rotten! Sit down! Ah-h, ah-h!!"

Mac Reed: "All of that 'particu-lar-ly' stuff makes me sick. I am simply boiling to get revenge on all of those molly-coddles and book worms (points to rostrum). Why, one of their number, and he is sitting there now with a brazen smile on his face, busted me in Freshman Math, and I want my revenge!"

Dr. Torrey (jumps up and shakes stick at Reed): "Shut up, Sir! I'll bust you again if I have a chance!"

J. N. Brown and D. R. Johnson (both rise and start to talking at same time).

Brown: "Sit down, Johnson, I have the floor."

Johnson: "Sit down yourself, I have it."

Brown: "No you haven't; er-er, gentlemen, as I was going on to say——"

Johnson: "I told you I had the floor!"

Brown: "Well you haven't."

Johnson: "You are a liar, I have."

Brown: "Sir, no man can call me a liar—look out, let me get to him." (Draws huge butcher knife and leaps at Johnson. Tubb and others seize him. Co-Eds scream).

Johnson (Pulls axe out of pocket—waves it in air): "Come on, I'm ready for you!" (More shrieks from Co-Eds—they catch Johnson by coat-tail and prevent him from tomahawking Brown).

Dr. Hedleston: "Young gentlemen, you should not be swayed by your passions. There has been entirely too much feeling in this affair to-day. You should always be guided by your reason. Let's go home and think calmly, and coolly over the question and resolve to abide by the results of the ball game."

(Exeunt)

We regret very much that the following Seniors failed to turn in their pictures early enough to appear in the front of the book with the rest of their classmates. It happened that the only space we had left was this page in the Book of fun; however, we are sure that this is agreeable to all parties concerned.
